Overview of Kansas Deaf & Hard of Hearing Education Bill of Rights

Steve Sublett provided an overview of IDEA law through the eyes of a hearing officer and lawyer. The Rowley Case, established by the U.S. Supreme Court, established the standard for FAPE.

Allison Emerson, parent representative from the ad-hoc committee that developed the Deaf/HH Education Bill of Rights, presented the draft document. She stated that the committee began Dec. '06 to discuss the basis for a draft document. The committee invited professionals, parents from many backgrounds within the deaf community, and teachers of the deaf to look at issues faced by parents and children and provide input into drafting this Bill of Rights that benefits deaf children birth – 21, stressing that parents be equal participants in their child's IEP. Allison acknowledged that some objectives are already in place and others could be accomplished without a Bill of Rights.

Public Comment: Deaf/HH Education Bill of Rights

Rebecca Rosenthal requested written feedback from SEAC on the Bill of Rights by Dec 1st. Colleen commented that SEAC had previously received an overview of the proposed Bill of Rights. SEAC will provide formal feedback to the SBOE, which will become public record. A copy of the letter was sent to Rebecca.

Veronica Frambers, lead interpreter at USD 259 Wichita, commented that the Bill of Rights is a great concept for any disability but needs to be in line with IDEA Law. Many great things are being done as a result of IDEA, assuring parents voices are heard.

Agenda Items

Action Taken

Review SBOE request for position papers:

- Deaf/HH Education Bill of Rights
- Autism Task Force
- Dyslexia

Melanie McKay-Cody commented that there needs to be more balance within the Bill of Rights and aligned with IDEA; laws are already in place to protect children.

Rod Bieker provided feedback on the State Board’s request for information on the Deaf/HH Education Bill of Rights, Autism Task Force, and Dyslexia. He states that there is room for improvement but not for more legislation.

- Dyslexia: Recommendations made by SEAC in years past still hold today – seem to parallel parent needs.
- Deaf/HH Education Bill of Rights: Parents need knowledge of resources available. Don’t pit children with disabilities against other groups.

Rod is available for further expertise as needed.

After Council member discussion, a motion was received from Bert Moore, seconded by Janice Frahm, and agreed upon by Council members to address all three papers utilizing previous letters submitted to the State Board; that SEAC would not support one area of disability over another because IDEA supports all identified disabilities. Concern was expressed that too many advocacy groups want preference. There are a great number of things moving forward in KS - MTSS, early intervening services for individual children’s needs – this will help students with autism; as well as current guideline documents for Deaf Education and Autism.

Review recommendations for teacher licensure to Dr. Tom Foster’s request at the Sept. meeting and review of APA Licensure Act Proposal

Members discussed issues with teacher salaries, KPERS vestment, and work on the KPA; how to get over barriers to support teachers; how to redesign special education training for the proper skills sets to get teachers into the special education environment; general education teachers need prep on how to deal with all students, differentiated instruction on mild disabilities; reading and language specialists could provide added levels of support with the MTSS. Districts are providing professional development to teach teachers.

Susan Helbert suggests looking at Professional Education standards to see how much is being done for special education – beefing up that piece, and how to work with

Agenda Items

Action Taken

IHEs to put more emphasis on meeting the needs of teacher vacancies; review funding formulas; special education be at the table to create a solution for all students to meet high content standards using the SPP data to help drive the conversation.

Dr. Foster will present SEAC recommendations to the State Board on teacher licensure.

- KITS, INKS and Project STAY continue to collaborate on individual case consultation requests and the provision of services to district personnel serving students with significant educational, behavioral, communicative and social challenges.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and the University of Kansas Medical Center's Center for Child Health and Development (CCHD) are collaborating to bring ASD diagnostic training to 9 interdisciplinary teams this summer. This is a pilot project designed to assess our ability to:
 - Partner with the medical community.
 - Establish a regional system for diagnostics in the area of ASD utilizing existing expertise and systems by enhancing the skill and knowledge of those systems through training.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and Families Together are collaborating by sharing one full time position. This position will be responsible for the development of a system of first responders to enable families of children who have received a positive screen for autism but have not yet been diagnosed with autism. This system will individual will act as a clearinghouse for parents by putting them in immediate contact with individuals that have been trained to explain the results of the screening, provide a list of activities and training on engaging their child in those activities and getting them in touch with the Tiny K Network, the Autism Early Intervention Waiver Agency and (where available) the Regional Autism Team to begin the process of gathering diagnostic information for the medical professionals. Or goal is to have someone in the home with this information within 7 days of a positive screen for ASD. This person in this position will help to train parents, Families Together Staff and will collaborate with Tiny K and the EI providers to provide training.

Mentoring Network

- KISN will be developing an on-line mentoring network for teachers who are working with students that present significant challenges in the areas of behavior, communication and social interaction. We will be developing a bank of mentors and provide services that match teachers needing mentors with those who are able to help them serve those students.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and SES will continue to work together to provide timely and relevant information to the Autism Interdisciplinary Teams in the area of Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) especially in the areas of Transition and Alternate Assessment.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and 2 school districts in the state will be collaborating to pilot the TEACCH Transition Assessment Profile (T-TAP). That project may be expanded once the data has been collected and analyzed to determine the effectiveness of the tool.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and KSDE are collaborating to develop and deliver a conference for administrators in the area of ASD. In addition to KSDE and KISN; Mountain Plains Regional Resource Center, as well as a number of the Regents Universities, KDHE, SRS and KASEA are collaborating on this project. Our research would indicate that this is the first Conference on ASD directed specifically at administrators.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN, the Ohio Center for Autism and Low Incidence, KSDE as well as the Nebraska Autism Spectrum Disorders Network are collaborating on the development of an Effective Supervision Checklist to improve programming for students with significant challenges in behavior, communication and social interaction.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and the districts that have agreed to have a staff member serve as a Regional Autism Consultant are joining together to provide a single IEP team with the opportunity to be trained in the Ziggurat Model (ZM) of functional behavior assessment. The ZM answers the question “Where is the autism?” by having teams complete an Underlying Characteristics Checklist (UCC) and an Inventory of Strengths and Skills (ISSI) as a part of the functional behavior assessment process.

Collaborative Partners

- KISN and KSDE are collaborating to supplement the character education / bullying curriculum through the addition of ASD specific materials to be distributed to general education school counselors.

Multi-Tier System of Supports (MTSS)

SEAC Update

April 16, 2008

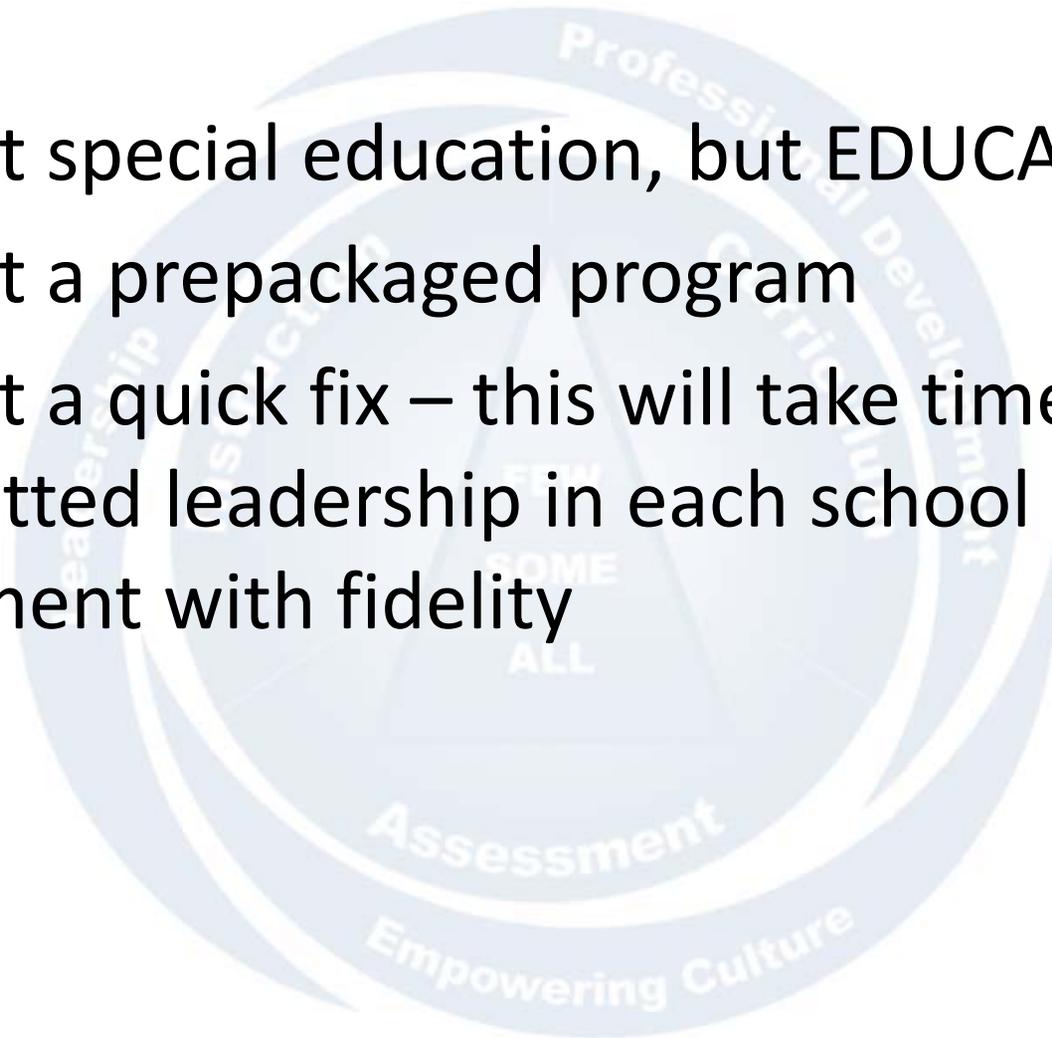

Focusing on the Name: Multi-Tier System of Supports

Multi-Tier	The Kansas model uses the research base of having multiple tiers of intervention available to all students.
System of	We move beyond programs and focus on bringing our resources together to create a single system to support student learning.
Supports	Student progress data guides the examination and re-alignment of resources to deliver services and supports designed to ensure that each student learns.

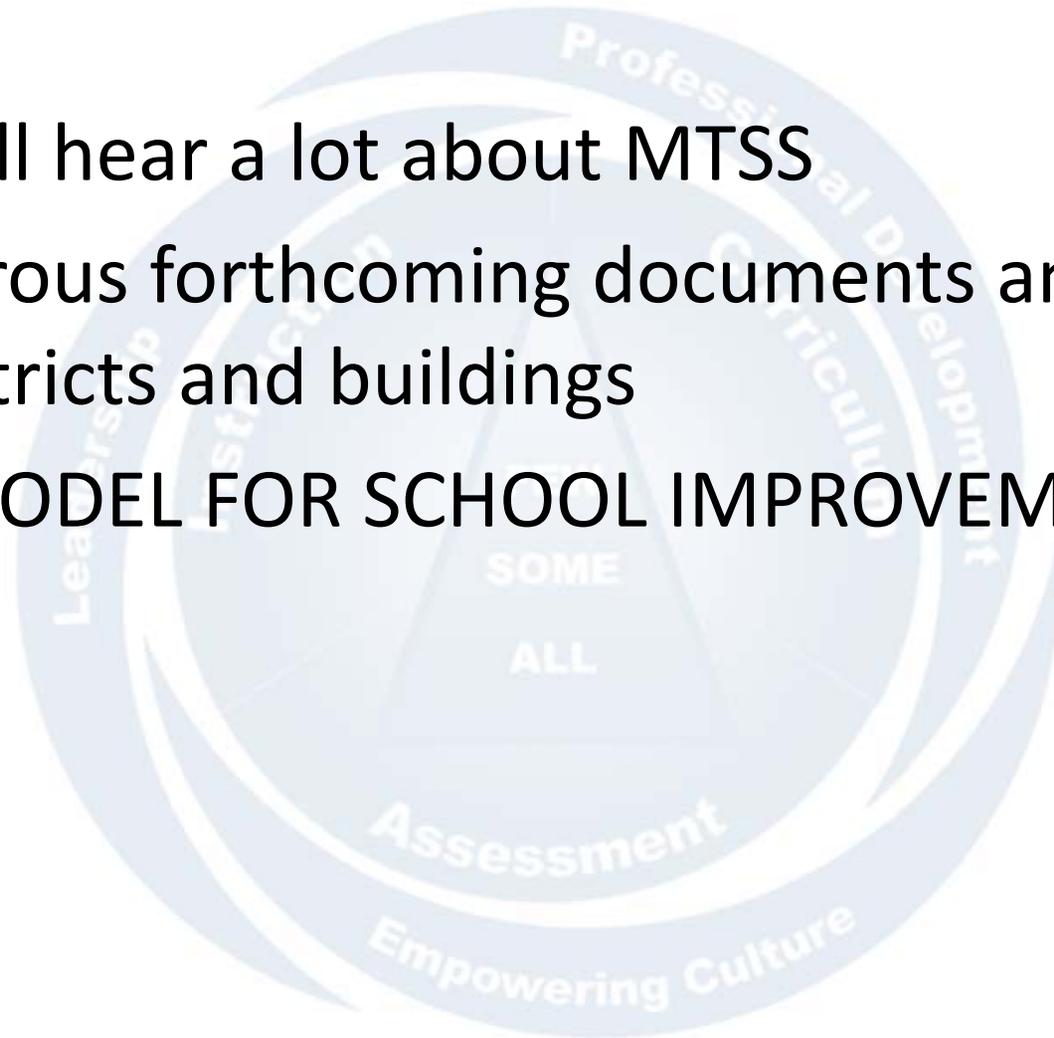

What MTSS is NOT...

- It is not special education, but EDUCATION!
- It is not a prepackaged program
- It is not a quick fix – this will take time and committed leadership in each school to implement with fidelity

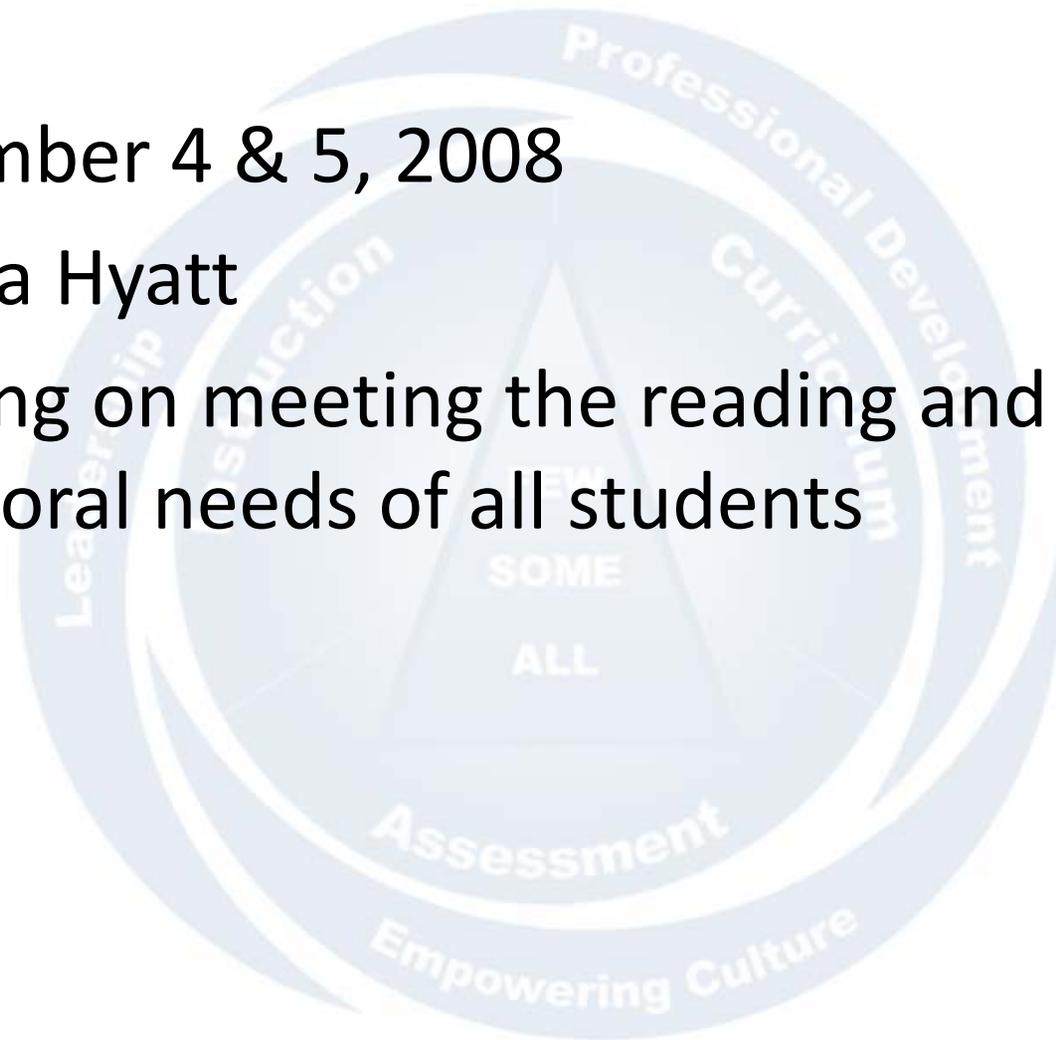

What can you expect?

- You will hear a lot about MTSS
- Numerous forthcoming documents and tools for districts and buildings
- THE MODEL FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT!
